Michigan State University Department of Geography

Graduate Geography Group Colloquium Series
Friday, September 6th, 2013

“Translating the Local & the Global on Fogo Island, Newfoundland: An Early-Stage Experiment in Remote Rural Cultural Economy via Planned Intelligent Development”

Dr. Kenneth Corey
Professor Emeritus of Geography
Michigan State University, Department of Geography

For more than thirty years Professor Corey has been engaging information and communications technologies-based city-regional development throughout Asia and the global economy. He has derived from these observations and researches development lessons and policies planning benchmarks for the use and tailoring of local development stakeholders. Professor Corey has served on the faculties of the University of Maryland, College Park; University of Cincinnati; and the University of Rhode Island. He has served as visiting faculty at the University of Wales, Aberystwyth, United Kingdom; and Peking University, China. He was Fulbright Research Scholar at the Institute for Southeast Asian Studies, Singapore.

2 PM
Room 126
Geography Building

Light refreshments and snacks will be provided